Details of the Activity
1	Title: Course on Bhakti and Sikh Tradition
2	Learning Objectives: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Valuing religious traditions as a source of meaning and purpose in human history. 2. Becoming aware of the intricacies and nuances of belief and practice within different Indigenous traditions. 3. Understanding how different traditions have developed over time. 4. Appreciating the need for better inter-religious relations as a social resource in facilitating civic peace and harmony.
3	Learning Outcomes: There have been several religious traditions—small and big, simple and complex, highly organized and lesser so—which have evolved over the centuries and even the millennia. While religion promises to be a rich resource for civic peace and harmony, it has not always been so. While the need for understanding, collaboration and fecundity between these traditions has always been important, this is felt even more in our age of instant global communication, when conflicts can exacerbate rapidly. Religious traditions need to be transformed into social resources for greater personal and social well-being. It is with this intent that this course has been curated.
